Axiom Consulting and Husch Blackwell Announce Collaboration

Consulting firm, law firm team up to benefit the animal health industry

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (Oct. 8, 2013) — Axiom Consulting and Husch Blackwell today announced a strategic collaboration designed to expand the abilities of both firms, in order to support business clients throughout the animal health sector. Axiom Consulting is a leading executive consulting services provider for the animal health industry while law firm Husch Blackwell offers a broad array of legal services including intellectual property management, regulatory and compliance support, litigation, and international trade work.

“This collaboration provides our firm with the means to offer our consulting clients the support of a highly respected and well-resourced legal team, capable of addressing a broad array of legal needs,” said David Cunningham, chief operating officer of Axiom Consulting. “Whether they are established multinationals or start-ups, the ability to access the highly skilled and capable team at Husch Blackwell makes for a welcomed addition to Axiom Consulting’s services.”

Patent attorney and veterinarian Stanley Baker, who recently joined Husch Blackwell’s Food & Agribusiness team as Senior Counsel — with a focus on expanding the firm’s presence in the agribusiness sector — agrees. “We are very pleased to have this opportunity to expand our presence in the animal health market through our collaboration with Axiom Consulting,” Baker said. “Through this relationship, we see the opportunity to support a variety of initiatives including intellectual property development and protection, asset licensing and acquisitions, and regulatory strategy and compliance.”

Both firms serve animal health clients throughout the United States from offices in Colorado, Illinois, Maryland, Missouri, Nebraska, Tennessee and Texas. They each are active members of the Kansas City Animal Health Corridor.
