Conversations with Kimberly: Philanthropy Inspires

Ask someone in animal health why they got into this industry and you'll usually get the same answer: the people and the animals. Animals are our passion, and for many, our calling. It's what drives our industry. It's also what motivates some to dedicate their lives to the species that can't speak for themselves. I'm referring, of course, to those who go above and beyond to help animals through philanthropic avenues.

The Animal Health Community Needs Your Voice

Engaging and educating students with firsthand insights are proven to change their perceptions of a profession and have the potential to modify their career path. We know Animal Health is a global industry with endless job opportunities. But, most teachers, students, and parents are unaware the field extends beyond veterinarians, farmers, and zoo keepers into research, business, and beyond.

Help us showcase the endless possibilities within Animal Health by sharing your day-to-day experience in your animal health profession with students through a "Day in the Life" video. These "Day in the Life" videos provide real-world examples of our unique workforce, shift perceptions, and increase awareness which is vital for attracting the next generation of workforce.
